GRAND VIEW HISTORY AND HERITAGE

Grand View is a private, not-for-profit university offering bachelor's and master's degrees. With 1,800 students, an average class size of 17, and a student-to-faculty ratio of 13 to 1, students get to know their professors and other students well. Committed to the development of the whole person – mind, body, and spirit – and to preparing students for successful careers and responsible citizenship in their communities and in a diverse and changing world, Grand View welcomes students from 40 states and 49 countries (about 21% of all students are from outside Iowa). Grand View is also one of the most diverse private universities in Iowa, with about 30% of the student body identifying as other than white.

Grand View was founded in 1896 by members of the Danish Evangelical Lutheran Church in America. Following the ideals of the Danish philosopher N. F. S. Grundtvig, the founders believed that a good education was essential for everyone as a foundation for life, work, and service to others. For much of its early history, Grand View was the school of choice for the children of America's Danish Lutheran immigrant families, who valued this small close-knit residential environment that embraced Danish roots. Proud of its legacy as the only remaining institution in the United States founded by Danish immigrants, Grand View remains affiliated with the Evangelical Lutheran Church in America (ELCA), a mainstream Protestant denomination that absorbed the Danish church in the 1960s.

For much of its early history, Grand View was a junior college. In 1975 the North Central Association accredited Grand View as a baccalaureate institution. During the 70s, 80s, and 90s, Grand View became far less residential than it had historically been, attracting largely commuter students. In the early 2000s, the administration sought to create a modern version of what Grand View had historically done so well – provide a quality liberal education in a close-knit residential community formed around Danish-Lutheran ideals. The resulting period of growth led to the construction of new residence halls, new academic buildings, and a new student center, as well as the launch of new majors, an innovative new core curriculum, and new sports, including NAIA national championship football and wrestling teams.

Dr. Rachelle Keck became Grand View's 14th President – and first female President – in July 2022. The early months of her presidency have been well-received by students, faculty members, and staff members as she has infused new energy into the University and introduced us to an exciting pace of execution and change. The campus community will undertake a significant round of strategic planning beginning early in 2023 with the aim of setting the new plan in motion in Fall 2023. Planning for a significant fundraising campaign is also underway.

Grand View's division of Graduate and Professional Studies, overseen by a Vice Provost, offers 10 undergraduate majors for about 250 working adults through accelerated courses in online and blended formats. In 2008, with the launch of its inaugural master's program, Grand View became a university and now offers six graduate programs: MS in Athletic Training, MS in Clinical Mental Health Counseling (soon to add School Counseling), Master of Education, Master of Social Work, MS in Organizational Leadership, and MS in Sport Management. The graduate programs enroll about 275 students.

Grand View has a significant economic impact on central Iowa, especially on the workforce. Year after year, even when times are difficult, nearly 99% of Grand View graduates are placed within six months of graduation, and most of them stay in central Iowa to work or continue their educations, including 60% of those who came to GV from outside Iowa. Thus, Grand View is a net importer of talent to central Iowa.
